Steamers, Texas to Hawaii.

The San Antonio Light Gazette of November 12 had the following: If the mission of Dr. C. C. Higgins and Alexander Hume Ford in Mexico is successful a steamship company, owned and directed in Texas will operate from Houston and Galveston to Honolulu, Japan and China via the Tehuantepec route.

Speaking of his visit Mr. Ford said: "I consider the opening of the Houston-Galveston ship channel a matter of the greatest importance to all Texas. Personally, I am interested and have been in communication with Doctor Higgins for the past eighteen months concerning the extension of the service of the Southern Steamship and Importing Company to Honolulu and the Orient via the Tehuantepec route. I think what this will be accomplished."

"Great changes are in progress in Hawaii, and if Texas is to reach out for the trade of Hawaii and the Orient she can best serve her purposes by having a Texas colony in Hawaii, the Crossroads of the Pacific, to further her interests there."

"Hawaii is raising cotton that she gets twenty-five cents a pound for. Texas farmers would best know how to develop this industry, now in its infancy in Hawaii. A California colony went to Hawaii five years ago and is responsible for the pineapple industry which is already encroaching on sugar. Coffee is coming to the front, tobacco, rubber and rice are raised."

"A line to the Orient via Tehuantepec and Hawaii should pay well. It is shorter from Galveston to Hawaii and the Orient by this almost all water route than by way of San Francisco, and it would make cotton rates from any part of Texas to the Orient drop considerably."

"From Hawaii there is the return cargo of raw sugar and I understand new sugar refineries are to go up on the banks of Texas waterways."
